TRIALS OF A SCHOOLMA'AM

Some Weird Answers Are Given by
Pupils in Final Examinations
After Year of Training.

I was proud of a very few of the little tots—and very proud. But from older children, in final examinations, after a year of my training, I got such answers as these. A member of the history class informed me that General Lee was the commander of "our" (the northern) side during the great Civil war; and that Cornwallis Jackson commanded on the other side. Another member of the same class suggested the name of "General Wolves"—apparently for both positions. A great statesman's career was thus epitomized: "Benjamin Franklin was a poor boy. He went barefooted. He got married to Dora." I was informed that Massachusetts was the first settlement in North America, and that Captain Cabbot helped the town. And when I requested a little information regarding General Sherman, I found out simply that he had once "taken a walk to the ocean." In geography Urazy and Yourp were mentioned as continents and Virginia was named as "an important western city." From the language class I gathered that a "noun is a table or a chair or a house," and I also learned that, while the subject of a sentence is what you are talking about, the predicate is what you are not talking about!—Laura T. Kent, in Atlantic.

MIGHT CHANGE

"I know I'm not half good enough for you, darling."
"Well, I'll marry you if you'll promise to maintain that same attitude after we're married."

VALUABLE RELICS.

A coat of mail worn by Count Lorenzo de Aldana in campaigns against the Incas when he served with Pizarro in the conquest of Peru, brought $360 the other day at a sale in the Anderson galleries, New York. One of the lieutenants of Aldana was an Alvarado, to whom he presented the coat when he passed through Quito on his way back to Spain, late in the sixteenth century. The Alvarado family remained in Ecuador and for more than three centuries collected potteries and other products of the Inca and pre-Inca periods, which brought at auction in the last week $11,882.

DEMOCRATIC.

"What sort of a man is Dick?"
"Awfully democratic."
"How's that?"
"He'll borrow money from anyone."

GETTING IT OVER WITH.

He—Didn't she marry rather young?
She—I know, but a fortune teller said her second marriage would be a dream.—Judge.

AT THE MILITARY PARADE.

He (a store clerk)—Why doesn't the line stand at attention?
She (a telephone girl)—I suppose, because the line is busy.

SAFE NOW.

Bess—Why, do you know, he calls on me oftener than he did before I refused to marry him.
Jess—The coward.—Judge.

WILL COME TOO SOON.

"How do you want your hair cut, Bub?" asked the barber.
"Say, if you kin, I wisht you'd cut it gray like father's," said Bub.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

The cat—Nice muzzle you're wearing, Sport. Cost much?
The Dog (easily)—About five bones a day!—Life.

DUNHAM LAND ROLLER

Solid and Double Corrugated Culti-Packer

Levels Soil Keeps Weeds Out Cultivates Crops

Saves Moisture Crushes Lumps Mulches Surface

CULTI-PACKERS are more than Clod Busters.

It crushes the big clods and lumps into a fine mellow seed bed.

The farmer who uses it right will have it in his field from early spring until late fall for one purpose or another. He will use it in every crop he grows—for preparing the seed bed, starting the seed, cultivating the growing crop, breaking crusts, saving moisture.

If you do not own a Culti-packer come in now and get one and have it on hand ready for use.
